

Marcellus Drilling News

Helping People & Businesses Profit from Northeast Shale Drilling

Cunningham Strikes Oil in West Virginia's Big Injun Territory

CLAY COUNTY | CUNNINGHAM ENERGY | ENERGY COMPANIES | WEST VIRGINIA

June 22, 2015

Back in 2013 we warned you that the injuns were coming—the Big Injun sandstone formation in West Virginia (see The Injuns are Coming! Injun Formation Drilling, that is). We told you then that Cunningham Energy of Charleston, WV was about to drill several shallow horizontal wells in the politically incorrectly named Big Injun Formation. We thought Cunningham was drilling for natural gas, but as it turns it, it was oil they were after. And, according to a press release, it's oil that Cunningham has struck in the Big Injun...

Please Login to view this content. (Not a member? Join Today!)

← PREVIOUS

Magnum Hunter's Bankers Say Get $65M in Cash by July 10, Or Else

NEXT →

PIOGA Asks Supreme Court to Stop DEP Denying Permits Using Act 13

You do not have permission to view the comments.

Please Login to post a comment